Final Practice Teaching Grade A

Unlike the average student who does not expect to teach, Miss Thomas handled her student teaching assignments as though she was being carried on a pay roll. She searched the library and other sources for material that might be used with retarded children. She was quite successful in bringing out a number of poor readers. We wish that Miss Thomas was interested in following the teaching profession. However, we wish her success in her chosen field and if we can ever say a good word for her, the pleasure will be ours.
